—The members of Canonchet Lodge, No. 2489, G. U. O. O. F., held a family social at Odd Fellows' Hall last night. The attendance was very good, though it was confined to the members and their immediate families. The entire arrangement had an Odd Fellowish appearance, the orchestra, prompter and caterers all being members of the lodge. The social was arranged by the following committee:—Henry W. Cooper, C. F. D. Fayerweather, W. Jackson, Robert Brooks, William Nightingale and Samuel Norris. D. B. Allen acted as floor manager.

THE FLOWER SHOW.

There is no better place in which to study flowers and ornamental plants than Masonic Hall, now occupied as an exhibition room by the Newport Horticultural Society. It is sometimes the case that such exhibits are made up almost entirely of greenhouse plants, but in this case there is a fine show of plants for the people. Here are the roses that may be grown in any garden, the hardy perennials now so rapidly coming into favor for bedding and borders, the products of the vegetable garden, all arranged and shown with as much care and pride as are given to palms, ferns and orchids. This is a show for the people, and the people owe it as a duty to themselves and to the parties taking the trouble to hold the exhibition to give it a liberal patronage. An hour or two spent here is an education concerning matters in which we all take an interest.

In our hurried notice yesterday the awards could not be fully given, and one or two errors crept in. The floral center piece credited to Gibson Brothers came from W. H. Williamson, the representative of F. W. Vanderbilt's gardens. The award to Gibson Brothers was for a full table of very large roses of one variety instead of an assortment. The herbaceous plants receiving the second award were from Woolson & Co., and Pitcher & Manda, through Mr. Weaver, but they had not been labelled as such when our report was prepared.

In addition to yesterday's list we may add that bronze medals are awarded to James S. Cowles with especial reference to a collection of what are popularly known as pitcher plants; to A. McClellan and to Robert Hunnick, for fine specimens and skilful arrangement. Messrs. Siebrecht and Wadley of Long Island have added an exhibit of ornamentals, and this morning fresh contributions have come in from several sources.

In the vegetable department the awards are to James Gohm for the best collection, with no second. For cauliflowers, P. F. Reynolds takes first, James Gohm second, and J. Allan third prize. For lettuce the order is P. F. Reynolds, J. Hass and J. Gohm; for rhubarbs, A. McClellan, first, and George Taylor, second; and for radishes, John Allan, first; A. Ramsey, second, and James Gohm, third.

The judges were:—On plants and flowers—W. Allen, Joseph Gibson and Samuel Smith; on fruits, Richard Gardner, John J. Carry and John Gibson; on vegetables, John Black, E. A. Brown and David Braman.

Literary Committee—Miss Lillian Lee, Miss S. P. Swinburne, Thomas Crosby, Jr.

THE LATE GEORGE R. CATHCART.

Mr. George Rhett Cathcart, who died here on Tuesday, was born forty-nine years ago in South Carolina. He served on General Longstreet's staff, but soon resigned and went to London. He studied law and literature until the close of the war, when he returned to this country. For a time he was connected with the Charleston News and Courier, and afterward was in journalism in New York city. In 1870 he was employed by Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co., publishers, and became a partner in the concern. He compiled "Cathcart's Literary Reader." During his last years he was the superintendent of the agency business of the American Book Company. Mr. Cathcart was a Republican and for a long time president of the Twenty-first Assembly district Republican organization. He was one of the commission which is considering the consolidation of several neigaboring cities with New York into one municipality. Mr. Cathcart's wife and one daughter survive him.

DEATH OF RICHARD SPRAGUE, M. D.

Dr. Richard Sprague died at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston Tuesday night of injuries received in attempting to board a crowded horse car in Cambridge last Thursday night. He was born in Boston in 1859, and was graduated from Harvard with high honors in 1881. Later he was graduated from the Harvard Medical School among the first five in the class of 1886. He served eighteen months in the Massachusetts General Hospital, and afterwards continued his studies for two years in Europe. His death removes one of the most promising physicians of Boston. He was a relative of several of the Newport summer residents from Boston.

THE FUNERAL OF THE LATE S. C. PUTNAM.

A large number of the friends of the late S. C. Putnam, general freight agent of the Old Colony railroad, attended his funeral yesterday afternoon at his late residence in Hyde Park. A special train on the Providence division of the Old Colony railroad conveyed three hundred of his former associates, including General Manager Kendrick and many heads of departments of that railroad, from Boston to attend the funeral. The Hyde Park selectmen and other town officials were present, as well as many friends. Rev. P. B. Davis of the Congregational church conducted the services, delivering a well-expressed eulogy of one with whom all felt it an honor to be associated. The body was entombed at Forest Hills.

THE STUDY OF LANGUAGES.

For some reason, perhaps because our mother tongue is the only one often heard, it seems particularly difficult for Americans to acquire the power of speaking French or German: that is, as long as they remain in this country. Abroad the teachers pronounce our countrymen and especially our countrywomen to be very quick at learning a language. A reason for this difference may be the different instruction given in this country from that where a language is at home. A foreigner often feels the depression of a strange land, and lacks that brightness and enthusiasm so essential to a good teacher of language. Again some persons labor under a mistaken idea that they can teach their native tongue without special preparation or any carefully thought-out method. That their pupils learn to read and perhaps understand, but not to express themselves, is to them only an evidence of inability on the pupils' part. A good teacher who is able to give confidence to pupils, and perhaps confidence is the first requisite in learning to speak French, is a rarity. Madame Prongue, who has established herself in Newport, is a teacher of rare merit, and has an intelligent method in her work which makes study with her a matter of pleasure. Madame Prongue is a Parisian, who has taught for some years in this country, always with success, as her testimonials show. She has done some good work already in this city, and would like to form classes, especially of children. Her address is No. 9 Kay street. It is a fine opportunity of getting an acquaintance with the French tongue, especially of learning to speak it with ease, that is offered by her presence here. M.

TIVERTON.

A carriage accident occurred at Snell's bridge, Tuesday noon, in which one of the old and esteemed citizens of the town, William S. Anthony, lost his life. Near the deceased's residence is a bench placed near the road under a tree, and some one in passing had left a load of grain there to be called for by its owners. A horse attached to a wagon took fright at this obstruction and ran. Mr. Anthony was driving near the bridge when the frightened horse dashed into his carriage and threw him out against the wall. He was picked up dead, with his head split open. The accident occurred in sight of Mr. Anthony's home. The frightened horse received injuries which caused its death. Mr. Anthony leaves a widow and one daughter.

Miss Hattie Almy and Miss Burt of this town sail for Europe on steamer City of Paris. They will be abroad five months, two of which will be spent in England, two in Scotland and one in Ireland.

Miss Florence W. Brown of Tiverton will give the valedictory at the B. M. C. Durfee High School, Fall River, at the commencement Friday evening, and Albion C. Cook, also of this town, son of John T. Cook, town clerk, has been appointed class poet.

Mrs. Benjamin Gage and Miss French of Pawtucket, who have been spending a week at Seaconnet Point and vicinity, returned home Tuesday morning.

IN CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday the conference report on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was agreed to. The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was taken up—the question being on the amendment as to the Utah commission. The amendment was agreed to, the House provision abolishing the Utah commission was struck out of the bill and two items appropriating $33,500 for the salaries of five commissioners (at $5,000 each) and for expenses of the commission were inserted. Amendments, offered by Mr. Carey of Wyoming, reducing the salaries of the commissioners to $2,000 each and providing that only residents of Utah shall be appointed commissioners, were agreed to, and the bill was passed. The pension appropriation bill was taken up. The only important committee amendment was one increasing from $133,048,300 to $144,956,000 the appropriation for invalids, widows and orphans' pensions. This was agreed to and the bill was passed. The postoffice appropriation bill was also passed as it was reported by the committee. A conference was ordered on the agricultural appropriation bill and a new conference on the Indian bill. The silver coinage bill was taken up and unanimous consent was given that a vote shall be taken on the bill and amendments tomorrow at 2 o'clock.

In the House the agricultural appropriation bill with Senate amendments thereto was presented, the Senate amendments were nonconcurred in and a conference was ordered, Messrs. Hatch, Caminetti and Funston being appointed conferees. Mr. Outhwaite of Ohio called up the conference report on the army appropriation bill and moved that the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment. The motion was agreed to and a new conference was ordered. A further conference was ordered on the Indian appropriation bill. Mr. McMillin of Tennessee moved that the House go into committee of the whole for the consideration of revenue bills, but the House finally adjourned without action.

THE "MAJESTY" OF THE LAW!

The United States government raided the Record office yesterday afternoon; and the raid was in every way a successful one. The crime which the paper had been detected in committing, and which it had been committing in the most brazen and open manner, was the publication on the upper left-hand corner of its business envelopes of a beautiful engraving depicting, in jet black lines upon a background of snowy white, the circular outline of that humble but useful little coin, the copper cent. The picture showed that side bearing the words "One Cent," the side of the cent popularly known as the tail. The government agents who finally detected the fracture of the law and hastened to put a stop to it made the very reasonable excuse that they had not noticed the law breaking picture for a long time after its appearance on The Record's envelopes because the head of the cent was hidden; and it was only by chance that they noticed the tail wag, and thus secured the clue which led them straight to the law-breakers' lair.

"You see," explained the foremost of the government's agents that came into the sanctum, "this seizure is to be made in a peaceable, quiet, undemonstrative, gentlemanly, wooly-white-lamb-with-a-string-around-its-neck sort of manner unless you refuse to give up the illegal dies or cuts from which the illegal pictures are printed; in which case the entire power of the United States government will be brought to bear upon you to convince you that it will be better to bend to the storm and not display that bravado which could only result in ultimate defeat."

The humble reporter to whom these portentous words were spoken by the leading emissary of the United States, while the other emissaries stood behind him as if ready to spring at any moment, was entirely ignorant of the meaning of the apparent raid. He turned a pale green shade from fear and hastily yelled for an office boy to produce an editor.

The Horse Editor hastened to the scene from an inner sanctum, and then clamored for the Managing Editor. The chief emissary repeated his elaborate preliminary remarks, and on being asked by the Managing Editor what he was talking about, went on to say that it was illegal to print or reproduce in any way the pictures, portraits or fac-similes of any of the coins struck off by the United States government, for the very good and sufficient reason that such reproductions stamped upon papers or upon any other material might be utilized by evil minded persons to swindle and mislead the ignorant. It was not probable, not even likely in a remote degree, that such a base use would be made of the modest cent which was hiding its head up in the corner of The Record's business envelopes, but the law was the law (at this point the chief emissary and 11 subordinates removed their hats and bowed reverently), and must be carried out by all true and honest citizens or Uncle Sam would have to move unpleasantly.

"In other words, gentlemen," said the chief emissary, "it is just this way. We don't want to make any trouble, for we don't believe you have been doing it on purpose, but duty is duty (again he and the other emissaries bowed their heads), and we must have those dies before we leave this office. Look at the thing in a fair, manly, above-board way, and you'll see we're right and only acting up to our orders and the law. Now, what do you say?"

The Real Estate Editor had slipped in meantime and quietly insinuated that the penny wasn't pretty anyhow. The Sporting Editor said it was wrong to print such a thing; that the emblem ought to have been a baseball bat. The speaking tubes to the Business Manager's office were utilized with refreshing rapidity, and there came a guttural:—"Well, I suppose we'll have to" from the bowels of the building, and the emissaries left in triumph. Thus the cherished picture that has gone hand in hand with The Record's great forward strides, never changing, will soon be a thing of the past.—[Philadelphia Record.
